THE ORIENT

Offering 10 exclusive and luxurious suites, The Orient Hotel in South Africa's Pretoria is a fabulous blend of Moorish and Colonial styles, with soaring arches and colourful tapestries decorating the walls and ceilings. Beautiful tiled bathrooms highlight the tasteful décor as does the individual styling in each suite. The large and secluded Marrakesh Suite is a haven for honeymoon couples, with beautiful, inspiring views of the surrounding valley. The breathtaking sunsets experienced from your room will be embedded in your memory forever. The Constantinople Suite features a swinging sofa, dark wood furniture and dark toned sheets, creating a glamorous and exotic atmosphere in the suite, along with a stunning balcony.

The hotel offers guests the chance to relax in the library, where they will find hundreds of exciting works of fiction and non-fiction, a gently luxurious reading space and some classical works of art. The artistic theme is incredibly strong at The Orient, with the Tienie Pritchard museum opening in 2007, which showcases the finest sculptures from the South African artist across his 38 year career. At Restaurant Mosaic it is not just the brilliantly modern cuisine that can be considered a work of art as guests will dine in the beautiful surroundings of pieces from the Art Nouveau movement, as well as work of other local artists, like Aleta Micheletos, Hendrik Pierneef, and Alexander Rose Innes to name a few.

The Orient Hotel in Pretoria, South Africa, is a special experience. From the moment you arrive, you are surrounded with beautiful gardens, breathtaking architecture, and an amazing collection of art, all delivered with a warm yet discreet style of service. I loved the fact that at no time did they interrupt the stay with transactions, rules, or checks. There is no check in and no proof of ID required (they just know). The real highlight is the food and beverage offerings at Mosaic, their signature restaurant. This has to be one of the finest food and wine offerings in the country: it's an experience you will always remember.
